LBL264: Affirmative Action and Discriminative Justice 4 Credits (4-1-0)

Discrimination has penetrated all societies and at all places without 'reservations'.

Phenomenon of discriminations does not discriminate. The Constitutions exhuming constitutionalism have safeguarded the rights of the discriminated and often insular minorities. The lineage of past discrimination is addressed by another set of discriminatory policies known as "affirmative action", "protective discrimination", "positive discrimination", "compensatory discrimination" etc.

The Constitution of India, 1950 ("Constitution") was enacted to balance the inequities prevailing in India. In this regard, the Constitution was a social document marked by a transformative vision. There was and still subsists systemic discrimination. The discrimination may be single, double or multi-layered. In a broad brush manner, a few grounds of discrimination are sex, caste, race, religion, sexual orientation, place of birth and, so on and so forth. The Constitution prohibits discrimination per se. When access is denied to public goods, the discrimination assumes an invidious form. But is prohibition on discrimination enough to break the ages old systemic discrimination? Or 'new' forms of discrimination are required to 'reverse' the effects of traditions old discrimination. A contrapuntal arises wouldn't constitutionally sanctioned discrimination violate the equality code of India (Articles 14 to 18)? The answer to these more than simple questions requires agitation of constitutional policy, principles, and judgments which will be undertaken in this course.

LML666-Law relating to Geographical Indication, Plant Varieties, and Biodiversity 3 Credits (2-1-0)

The law relating to Geographical Indication, Plant Varieties and Biodiversity complement each other. GIs were developed to protect consumers, offering reliable information about the goods they buy. It was initially thought that GIs could also afford protection to producers by fighting against unfair competition and “reputation theft.” The third generation of GIs extended this concept to the rural landscape. If they could be used to protect producers, they could be used for rural development. Only recently was the concept extended to the environment and to the cultural and biological diversity associated with production. What remains to be seen is whether and how GIs can have an impact on the management and conservation of the cultural and biological diversity associated with products. The course intends to explore these IPRs and study the interface shared among them.
